| Brief Summary                                       | Somatoform disorder is one of the most common mental health illnesses. The disorder exhibits medically unexplainable symptoms which are characterized for long duration. The symptoms are highly disruptive, not only to the individual but also to their family members and affecting the family functioning. The Social support from the family members, friends and significant others may help individual to cope with the illness effectively and also improves their psychological health The aim of present study is to describe the family functioning and perceived social support among the person with somatoform disorder. The study will adapt descriptive research design with quantitative research approach. Using purposive sampling technique sample size of 30, meeting the inclusive and exclusive criteria will be selected from the OPD of tertiary mental health care setting. The Family Assessment Device (FAD), Multidimensional scale of perceived social support (MSPSS) and patient health questionnaire -15 (PHQ) will be administered. The collected data will be analyzed by using SPSS. The result will be reported to the authorities and institution and will be disseminated through conferences, scientific research journals and articles. The confidentiality and the anonymity of data and patient will be maintained. |
